Section 3: A list and brief description of Long-Term (or "Prong 3") non-vacancy-specific recruitment initiatives implemented during the previous year.

Washington State University

The Edward R. Murrow College of Communication and Northwest Public Broadcasting are part of Washington State University (WSU). Both areas are committed to following WSU's plans and initiatives regarding Equity and Diversity. Equity and Diversity is an important aspect of everyday life at Washington State University. WSU provides institutional leadership in recruiting, retaining, and rewarding diverse faculty and staff; educating the campus and beyond about issues of diversity; and offering unique facilities that help students, faculty, and staff honor and celebrate the many cultures represented in the community. The Strategic Plan for Washington State University includes: create and sustain a university community that is diverse, inclusive, and equitable; recruit, retain, and advance a diverse intellectual mix of faculty, staff, and students, including women and those from underrepresented groups; assure diversity and inclusion efforts are visibly and consistently supported at the highest levels of leadership; and maintain respectful, inclusive, and equitable behavior in all university environments.

The Edward R. Murrow College of Communication at Washington State University Career Symposium and Public Address/Hosting Job Fair:

In April, the College sponsored the Murrow Symposium Career Day which featured: Meet the Pros. Students and faculty of the College where encouraged to attend workshops, including résumé critiques, and a discussion on the future of the communication industry. Professionals from the fields of broadcast, marketing and print media were available to answer questions and provide employment feedback and opportunities for career connections.

College sponsored student organizations and initiatives

Murrow College sponsors student programs, clubs and scholarship which promote diversity in the communication and broadcast fields. These include the Association for Women in Communications, study abroad opportunities and scholarships directed specifically at under representative groups such as Native Americans, Hispanic and women student scholars.

Northwest Public Broadcasting - Television

Internship Program

The Northwest Public Broadcasting – Television (NWPB-TV) Internship program is designed to give staff

the opportunity to involve themselves more deeply in training of student and part-time employees and gain knowledge to perform at a higher level. The program is based on that of another noncommercial educational station, which provides a model for this type of two-way training that is so valuable in broadcasting, especially in a small market where recruiting and retention of qualified individuals is difficult and poses a significant challenge. Examples of internship projects include: working as crew members for many on and off campus projects supported by NWPB-TV; working as program producer and production assistant; assistance with maintaining NWPB-TV web site; and editing of programs for use on-air and off. During the period between October 1, 2017 and September 30, 2018, NWPTV had 7 interns.

Training Programs for Stations Personnel/Mentorship Program

Washington State is determined to strengthen its program in the television area, by promoting the idea to staff and by creating specific job descriptions for the student-mentoring positions. In addition to enabling staff to "teach" others, we also have a policy that allows employees to take up to 6 credits of university credits per semester under a tuition-waiver program. The licensee supports this as a way of recruiting qualified individuals to this rural area and to retain and retrain current employees in order to advance. The organization continues to reap the benefits of this mentoring program.

Events or Programs with Educational Institutions Relating to Broadcasting Careers

NWPB-TV staff made presentations during the first week of several communication classes at Washington State University. The purpose was to inform students of intern opportunities with the station and how it might help them develop career skills in both television and radio. This internship program was also promoted to students on the station's website and on flyers posted in campus buildings. NWPB-TV continues, on an annual basis, to set up a booth at the Family Expo in the Tri-Cities area that allows them the opportunity to talk with children and parents about several topics including a child's "dream" to work in television.

Northwest Public Broadcasting - Radio

Internship Program

Northwest Public Broadcasting – Radio (NWPB-R) operations has an active internship program. The staff of NWPB-R regularly participates in area college and high school career days in our broadcast region. Students learned more about public broadcasting, received information on how to get involved, and what internship opportunities exist. During the period from October 1, 2017 to September 30, 2018, NWPB-R had internship positions filled including internships in News Production, Marketing, Broadcast Operations and Programming.

Events with Community Groups Relating to Broadcasting Career Opportunities

The station also regularly hosts tours and open houses for community groups, volunteers and general public to visit the station. NWPB-R staff routinely speak in front of students in classroom or special presentations about careers in public broadcasting in general and opportunities at Northwest Public Broadcasting specifically. NWPB-R is also involved in local community events, musical performances and fairs and distributes information about the station and opportunities with members of the public at these events. The staff of NWPB-R serve on many community groups such as Boys and Girls Club, Rotary and Kiwanis, within these organizations and their activities, NWPB-R staff are recognized and invited to work with youth and community volunteers.

In April 2018, NWPB-R hosted a training program in Richland, Washington aimed to 14- to 16-year-old youths interested in learning about reporting and journalism, and career opportunities.

In August 2018, NWPB-R participated in recruitment activities at the Washington State University All Campus Picnic where students learned about employment opportunities in radio, television, and news media.

In September 2018, NWPB-R participated in recruitment activities at Washington State University's Connect Fest where students could learn about employment opportunities within the NWPB jazz station, KJEM.

Continued training for personnel

Northwest Public Broadcasting – Radio is committed in encouraging personnel to continue with job training by attending conferences which will help them acquire skills that could qualify them for higher level positions.

The population of the market for this environment unit is fewer than 250,000, and the stations are therefore required to complete 2 long-term recruitment activities every year.
